

Red Flags: On Breaking Up

Please, grant me cruelty.

So I may slough you off as a snake sheds its skin, re-emerge without the burns seared by your warm, soft fingertips.

Spare me the embarrassment of stuttering:

Red, heart fluttering—

My friends tell me to look again

At the white flag she waves
colored by my rose-tinted gaze.